Show A Little Respect

"When you like your work every day is a holiday."

-Frank Tyger

Diane Dixon

We are grateful that we live in a part of the world where we have the religious freedom to celebrate Christmas or any other holiday if we so choose. It seems too often there is controversy over Christmas trees versus Holiday trees and wishing someone a Merry Christmas versus Happy Holidays. It also seems that some would rather argue over these differences than respect them as differences and simply enjoy the true essence of the season: love, joy, peace, hope, and goodwill towards men! We have many friends, family and clients who are diverse in their religious faith and cultural backgrounds; both religious and non-religious. We respect each and every one as individuals and for the relationship we have with them. It is not our job to try and sway or change someone to believe the way we believe, nor do we have to compromise our values and beliefs. We are happy for the religious and cultural pluralism that exists in our world! Regardless of your ethnicity or religious affiliation; whether you choose to celebrate the religious aspects of the holiday or the cultural parts; we hope it is meaningful to you and you are respectful of the choices of others.

From our hearts, we wish you each a very Merry Christmas and a holiday season filled with all of the love, joy, peace and hope your hearts can hold!
